Re: We Need Your Help.

Dear K-12 Teachers,

The Center on Online Learning and Students with Disabilities needs teachers to act as survey facilitators. That is, to recruit fellow teachers, students with disabilities, parents, and administrators who work with any online learning programs (either fully online or blended, such as Blackboard, Study Island, Khan Academy, etc.) to complete short surveys. The information we glean from this study will help us study online learning as it continues to grow across the country. We know you're busy and we're happy to compensate you for your time and effort. We need facilitators who teach at least part of their time online and have recently taught, or will teach, at least some students with disabilities using online learning. Does this sound like you or someone you know? Let us know if you or someone you know is interested in this great opportunity to improve learning for all students.

Sincerely,
The Center's Research Staff

Just to make sure we're on the same page, here are the requirements you would need to meet:

1. Teach at least part time using online learning
2. Have recently taught or plan to teach at least some students with disabilities in online settings
3. Be willing to complete a 20-minute survey
4. Recruit 5 other teachers (these individuals would need to meet the requirements in points 1 and 2) to complete the survey
5. Recruit 5 parents, 5 students with disabilities, and one administrator who participate in online learning to complete the survey

If you're interested in helping us, we'll show you our gratitude by presenting you with a $250 stipend and access to a Professional Learning Community that includes at least three educational webinars.
